INTRODUCTION

In its archival, manuscript, and microfilm holdings the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission has amassed a rich treasure of source materials for research and writing on the history of Pennsylvania. By gathering and making these research materials accessible to the serious student and scholar, the Commission is meeting its responsibility to preserve public records and to gather information on Pennsylvania history by microfilming or otherwise copying historic documents, letters, and records. It likewise has the responsibility of compiling lists and guides to the materials for Pennsylvania history; and this Preliminary Guide is a step toward the fulfilment of that responsibility.

This Preliminary Guide is in no sense a complete listing and analysis of the research materials in the Commission's collections. Its object is to present briefly the general character of the documents, letters, and other sources in the care of the Commission so that historians and other researchers may discover the materials which may be of value to them. Since the descriptive entries are necessarily brief, users of the Preliminary Guide may occasionally find it desirable to write for fuller information on the detailed contents of some of the collections.

Aside from the two special and important collections at the Drake Museum near Titusville and at Old Economy in Ambridge, the Commission's holdings of research materials are divided between the two divisions of the Bureau of Research, Publications, and Records—the Division of Public Records in the State Education Building and the Division of Research and Publications in the State Museum Building. The Division of Public Records as the repository for State records of permanent value and historical significance has many documents of value for research. The volume of these records is immense; and many parts of them are as yet imperfectly arranged and lack detailed archival guides. Many can be used only with difficulty because of crowded storage facilities. It should also be noted that there are serious gaps in the holdings of the official records of the Province and the Commonwealth; some gaps represent items or whole record series irretrievably lost before the establishment of a State archives; other gaps exist because the records are still in the possession of existing State agencies. There are likewise a number of collections of private manuscripts in the Division of Public Records.

INTRODUCTION

The greater volume of the Commission's research materials is in the Division of Public Records, but there are many important collections of microfilms, transcripts, and manuscripts in the custody of the Division of Research and Publications. These materials were acquired in part by donations to the Commission, but the greater proportion were gathered as the result of a carefully planned program of locating and reproducing photographically manuscripts, maps, and newspapers relating to Pennsylvania which were in other depositories or in private possession.

It will be noted that the two divisions in many instances have collections of the same types of material. The duplication is the result of the separate and unrelated origins of the organizations from which the divisions stem. It is perpetuated at the present time because of their physical separation and the shortage of suitable storage space. When better facilities are available to house the divisions and to store the collections, the research materials will be consolidated.

Members of the Commission staff cannot undertake searches for information on the films or elsewhere in the collections, but they will be happy to advise and provide assistance for those doing such research. The Commission staff is likewise unable to carry on genealogical research, but the Division of Public Records will make its military and other records accessible to genealogists and will provide certificates under seal. Genealogists can obtain assistance and advice in their research from the Genealogical Section of the State Library. They may also find helpful information for locating sources of needed genealogical data in the Division of Public Records' Information Leaflet No. 1, which is available on request.

Henry Howard Eddy, Chief of the Division of Public Records, has been responsible for the listing of the holdings in that division. Donald H. Kent, Chief of the Division of Research and Publications, compiled the listing of the collections in his division and also edited the manuscript and prepared the index. Thomas J. Garin, late Curator of Drake Well Memorial Park, made the listing of the collections at the Drake Museum; and Lawrence Thurman, Curator at Old Economy, prepared the description of the Harmony Society Records. William A. Hunter, Associate Historian; Mrs. Autumn L. Leonard, Assistant Historian; Miss Martha Simonetti, Archivist; and Mrs. Mary Kelker Sturges, former Librarian of the Commission, gave valuable aid in checking entries and advising on the listing of various collections with which they are especially familiar.

DIVISION OF PUBLIC RECORDS

Here are listed the holdings of the Commission's Division of Public Records, a Division which constitutes the State archives of Pennsylvania. For the most part these holdings are made up of records transferred from various State departments and agencies since the creation of the archives office in 1903. Before that time there was no general policy for the preservation of public records, and as a result there are many gaps in the archival holdings. As public records of permanent value or historical interest are continually being accessioned for preservation, it follows that no list of holdings can ever be complete. Besides the public records, the Division has some manuscripts and collections of private origin. In the listing which follows the individual entries are arranged under nine main headings: Province of Pennsylvania, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Departments and Agencies, Temporary Boards and Commissions, Internal Improvements, State Institutions, Microfilm, Miscellaneous, and Private Manuscripts.

HISTORICAL PROPERTIES

Two of the historical properties administered by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission have important collections of manuscripts, newspapers, and other source materials. At the Drake Well Memorial Park near Titusville a significant feature is the Drake Museum, a depository for all kinds of historical records and relics relating to the history of the petroleum industry. Old Economy, the third and final home of the famous Harmony Society, at Ambridge, has a large collection of the records of that organization which are significant not only for the history of the Society but for the economic and social history of western Pennsylvania and the upper Ohio region in general.
